Intro

A Korean-born American with an Irish last name and French surname, a love of the German language, and an inability to be defined by any one stereotype or category, Jill's life could be classified as anything but simple. While attending Northwest University in Seattle for her B.A. in Education, she met and married her husband. They eventually moved back to her husband's hometown on Billings, Montana and had four kids.

Professional Work

Jill's work was not limited by her degree. Not only was she musically and artistically gifted from a young age, but she has always had a gift with words as well. She has worked as a business consultant, public speaker, writer, and minister.

Writing

Writer for Yellowstone Valley Women's magazine

Editor and writer for Covenant Companion

Blogger

Currently writing a memoir on PTSD and mental health

Photography

Self-taught later in life, Jill's ambition has led her to become a skilled and sought-after photographer in her area. She has shot weddings, events, and singular photo shoots. Examples of her work will be put here.

Art

While she has always been inclined towards crafts and hobbies such as quilting and knitting, Jill has shown great talent in other mediums. Below will be examples of art in pen, watercolor, and/or acrylics.
